motor tract of the brain, and that the slight incoordination which exhibited itself was due to the extension of the trouble into the cerebellum.

It is found that the danth of Nelson Theroux which occurred on April 8, 1916, was attributable to the injury received by him on the 24th day of received by him on the 24th day of May, 1814, and that it occurred within a period of two years following the injury.

On the medical certificate of death, which was signed by Dr. L. J. Papineau of Webster, Mass, the attending physician, the cause of death was given as "Blow received on head," and the secondary cause was stated to be "General debility," both very indefinite terms and terms which should hardly be acceptable as a correct and definite cause of death, and the respondent was requested to get the respondent was requested to get a more definite statement from the physician as to the exact cause of death with the result that a letter was written by the attending physician, staling that the cause of death was "Cerebellum Tumor caused by a blow received on the head."

As there was no post-mortem exam-ination to definitely decide the char-acter of the injury to the brain and the attending physician makes the Fowler, treasine attending physician makes the statement as given in paragraph 8, it is to be assumed that there is existing a casual connection between the death and the injury which the decedent received on May 24, 1914.

The report of the board was favorable in every respect, with the exception of her bottom, which was found in such a condition that it made it necessary to have it scraped before going to sea. While at Hampton Roads the North Atlantic squadron came in and we joined and participated with it in the drill and inspection before President read the call of the meeting.

Ex-Congressman Edwin W. Higgins arose and said: Time and conditions change and so do men. If they do change they get left. He said he understood that there were some 200 who signified their desire to consolidate the two civic hodies and he could date the two civic bodies and he could hate the two civic bodies and he could not see any opposition to the consolidation.
